Workplace Anti-Bullying Policy

- (a) identification of bullying risk factors- these are things and situations which could contribute to bullying such as the way in which staff are managed, or organisational change such as redundancies (refer to the common risk factors set out below);
- (b) assessment of the likelihood of bullying occurring from the risk factors identified and their potential impact on the workplace participants or workplace;

This checklist has been developed to assist Carrington West to identify, assess, eliminate and/ or control bullying in the workplace, taking in to account the common risk factors (refer below).

9. WHAT ARE SOME OF THE COMMON RISK FACTORS WHICH MAY LEAD TO BULLYING?

9.1 Bullying can result from a number of different factors in a workplace, from the general culture to poor management skills. Some risk factors which make bullying more likely to occur are:

- (a) Organisational change - i.e. significant change in the workplace that may lead to job insecurity for example, restructure and redundancy, introduction of technology, change in management.
- (b) The culture – insert name’s values, views and beliefs can either expressly or implicitly encourage bullying behaviours, for example, when a company promotes aggressive behaviour as a means of ensuring its workers are performing their roles, or adopts a culture in which it is acceptable to ignore such behaviours.
- (c) Negative leadership styles – such as strict, autocratic management styles, which do not allow for flexibility or involvement by employees; or passive, ‘laissez-faire’ management styles which are characterized by a tendency to avoid decisions, inadequate supervision and little guidance to workers.
- (d) Inappropriate systems of work – this includes excessive workloads, unreasonable timeframes, uncertainty about roles and how they should be performed, and lack of employee support.

Workplace Anti-Bullying Policy

- (e) Poor work relationships –this can be characterized by poor communication between staff and management, or negative relationships with supervisors or colleagues, excessive criticism by manager and the exclusion or isolation of workers.
- (f) Workforce characteristics – a company’s workforce can be made up groups of workers who may be at a higher risk of bullying because of certain characteristics: for example, young workers, new workers, apprentices, injured workers, workers in a minority group because of their race, disability, religion, gender or sexual preference.

9.2 Carrington West will consider these factors when undertaking its risk management process.

10. COMPLAINT PROCEDURE

11.2 This is not a compulsory step. If a workplace participant does not feel comfortable confronting the person, or the workplace participant confronts the person and the behaviour continues, the worker should report the issue to their manager. If the manager is the alleged perpetrator, then the matter should be reported to a senior manager, or to Manager or immediate supervisor.

11.3 If at any time, a workplace participant is unsure about how to handle a situation they should contact Manager or immediate supervisor for support and guidance.
